

The MIT English as a Second Language Program for Service Employees is looking for volunteers to tutor night shift employees one hour/week or to fill in for the regular weekly tutors as needed. No experience is required, just a good command of English and an interest in helping individuals whose first language is not English. The goals of the program are to build student's confidence, to help them become more productive in their jobs, and to perhaps open up further opportunities for advancement. Tutoring takes place on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 11:00 - midnight beginning Tues., June 19. The summer session runs through the week of July 27.

This is an opportunity to make a real and positive difference.
