Ken Davis

Executive Vice President,
Gartner Inc.

MIT Alumni

Cracking Your Career

As a graduate of MIT you will have a vast array of career options, but exploring options consumes one of your most precious resources...your time. This talk is designed to help you to understand yourself and discover what motivates and inspires you. It also details how to use that knowledge to find a career that is your best match.

Dr. Davis is an executive vice president at Gartner, a S&P 500 research and advisory company with 15,000 employees and an annual revenue of $4 billion. Prior to joining Gartner, Ken was a partner of McKinsey & Company serving leading software and IT services clients. Ken earned a Ph.D. in atomic physics from MIT. While at MIT, Ken worked with Wolfgang Ketterle on observations of Bose-Einstein condensation in gaseous sodium atoms, and was the recipient of Compton Fellowship, the Wolfe Fellowship, and the Deutsch Prize.
