The MIT English as a Second Language Program for Service Employees is looking for volunteers to connect with service employees over the phone for one hour/week, helping them improve their English skills through informal conversations. No experience is required, just a good command of English, a smartphone, and an interest in helping individuals whose first language is not English. The goals of the program are to build students' confidence, to help them become more productive in their jobs, and to open up further opportunities for advancement.
